BROW LAMINATION AFTERCARE

Your brows are sleek and standing to attention – keep them this way with some super important aftercare tips. If aftercare is not followed, your lamination may not last very long, the hair might dry out, your brows may end up looking curly, and the hairs may break or snap, or even fall out!

- Don't get your brows wet for 24 hours. They need time to set.
- Avoid swimming, steam, saunas, steamy showers and sweating for 24 hours. Avoid sticking your head in a hot oven!
- Don't rub your brows – this can damage the lift.
- Condition your brow hair daily, using a good quality hair conditioner (the same one you use for your head hair). Pop some conditioner on to wet brows, wait a few minutes, then rinse well.
- Style your brows every day, ideally when wet, using a spoolie (clean mascara wand). Brows can be brushed with a spoolie a few times per day to keep them in the correct position. Brush hairs in the same direction as they were set during the lamination. Follow the curve of the hairs.
- Use Elleeplex (preferred) or Castor Oil every single night. This is really important to maintain hydration of the brow hair. Brush Elleeplex through the brow hairs and style in to place using the spoolie that comes with it, or another clean mascara wand. Or, if using Castor Oil, apply the oil using the roller bottle and brush through the brow hairs, styling them in to place with a spoolie. This can be washed off the next morning.
- Don't sleep on your face – you'll smooch your brows.
- Avoid spray tanning for at least 24 hours before and after a brow lamination.
- The use of Henna is not recommended until at least 4 days after brow lamination. Tinting and Hybrid Dye are ok at any stage after lamination however, and is preferred.
- It is highly recommended that you have a brow treatment every 3-4 weeks to maintain the health of the brow hairs.
- Be gentle with your brows. Show them some love and take care of them. Brow lamination is a high maintenance treatment, so if you follow the aftercare advice, they should stay looking sexy for up to 8 weeks.
